HONGKOND, MAY 18rg, 1884.

THE news we publish to-day of the settlement of the difficulty between France and Ohina at longth and rather suddenly brings to a close a painful state of tension. For months past the question of peace or war has been banging in the bulance, and the uncertainty has had a most depressing influence on trade. And now, as the result of it all, comes the really good news that peace is assured and that the provinces of Yunnan, Kwangei, and Kwangtung are to be opened to foreign trade. Whether they are to be thrown open completely, or what if any limitations are to be imposed on foreign intercourse, the news received by telegram does not state. It may be taken for granted, however, that the West River will be thrown open to foreign steamers and that arrangements will be made for trade at all the more important towns along its banks. We have frequently urged the importance of opening up the Pearl River, but with concerned, was launched on Sunday morning by it as symbolising a perpetual readiness to go out Forry, who has come out to examine the mining cautioned him and he then went away using little expectation of seeing our views carried Mr. Amow, of Yaumati. At a dinner recently a New York physician of eminence, whom I sat near, told an interesting story of an English dinner. "It was some years I had come too late to make the acquaintance of the other guests. To me was assigned to take to the table a lady whom I did not know. and whose name I did not distinctly hear. She had a shy face, and a gentle, sweet voice and deprecating manner, as if ahe was bashful and sought to escape observation. To encourage her, I plunged at once into the topic I had just been discussing with a friend-George Eliot's last novel, Middlemarch. Finding that my companion listened intelligently and knew what I was talking about, I said I had been pained to discover a technical error in my favourite au-Middlemarch."-New York Letter. ___

EXTRACTS. WANT OF WISDOM. Ho that is of reason's skill bereft, And wants the staff of wisdom him to stay, Is like a ship in midst of tempest left, Without an holm or pilot her to sway; Full sad and dreadful is that ship's event So is the man that wants intendiment,

A MAN AND RAT FIGHT. The Ilkeston correspondent of the Sheffield Daily Telegraph writes :- The details of diagusting exhibition of brutality have just transpired at Ilkeston in the shape of a man andrat fight which occurred a few days ago at Cotmanhay, a suburb of Ilkeston, chiefly inhabited by colliers. Unlike the Hanley "man and dog fight," which proved to be a myth, the circumstances of this affair can be vouched for as strictly correct. At a spot near the Gramby Colliery a group of men collected. Presently a piece of string was produced, and a fierce-looking rat was forthcoming. The cord was attached to the animal's tail, and the rat was the centre of attraction for a moment or two, while a man among the group, who was familiarly addressed with a nickname which betokened him to be of Irish origin, allowed his hands to be tied behind him with another piece down and a shower of "coppers" was thrown to encourage him. The man in charge of the rat (himself an authority in the pugilistic art, it is said) placed the animal on the ground, retaining in his possession the string attached to its tail. The fight then began in earnest, and the man and the rat

One of the chief delights of Continenta travel, as every person of experience will admit, is the unlimited opportunities it affords for buying antiquities. The statuary, the coins, and the pictures that may be purchased in Italy are a source of never-failing interest to English travellers and of neverfailing profit to Italian dealers. Andalusia, again; is a huge curiosity shop. Being once upon a time in Seville, we came across af retired British grocer or tailor, or something of that kind, who had just purchased a Madonna and Child-unhappily, unsignedwhich he had picked up for a few pounds in a dingy back street. He was going to send it to the Exhibition of Old Masters, and, if he ever did so, he probably found that it was worth only a pound or thirty shillings at the outside. It is the same, indeed, throughout Spain: The altar cloths, broken fans, the inlaid tables and cabinets, as resplondent as anything in the convent of the Cartufic at Granada, the wonderful chairs, and the still more extraordinary scraps of ancient lace, upon which all who have ever travelled in Spain have spent much money—these abound from Malaga to Irun, and naturally one is inclined to speculate a little on the odd circumstance that the supply is more abundant than ever, although the demand is fairly brisk. Tangiers is, we should say, a hotbed of modern antiquities, and even Mr. Chamberlain bought some of them when he was over there a year or so ago. He ought to have known something about this class of goods, being a Birmingham man, but the childlike faith of the President of the Roard of Trade in all things ancient, is materious. America, oddly enough, has taken to this business of manufacturing the antique Dutch cabinets that, with bronze panels, dingy and marked with the cracks of fictitious centuries, are turned out every day from Chicago furniture stores, and for some purposes they are quite as useful as if they had indeed belonged to some departed burgher in the dead cities of the Zuyder-Zee. - New York experts in this sort of forgery make a specialty of Queen Anne chairs and tables, and the imitation is so perfect as to deceive all but those who have studied such things minutely in Europe. The explorer of furniture stores may come upon magnificent specimens of English Gothic chamber pieces or ancient-looking Chippendale and Sheraton chairs, which might have belonged to Queen Elizabeth but for the fact that they did not:

Two essentials are needed in order to produce the physical phenomenon of laughter in man. First facial, vocal or other muscles. including the diaphragin; and, second, the emotions or ideas which give rise to laughter. Certain animals possess both these essentials. The chimpantee is said to smile. The smile of the titi monkey is a playful one, The dog can both smile and grin, whether affection or pleasure, hypocrisy or cunning dictate. Dogs distinguish the different kinds of laughter; they note the distinction between that which is goodhumoured and that which is sarcastic. They are sensitive to ridicule, yet not unfrequently try to produce laughter in mun, and deep is their mortification if they fuil. Romanes tells us of a Skye terrier that tried to amuse his master and provoke his laughter by Paris, entitled, the "Famous Jewels of certain tricks it had taught itself, and was aulky if bis efforts proved fruitless An Europe."
